WHAT IS THE YEAR-END REVIEW?

- The Year-End Review is the time at the end of the year to pause and assess in-year contribution, review skills maturity and reflect on overall employee development
- The Year-End Review process gives a holistic view of the employee, ensuring the year-end assessment reflects skills maturity and development, as well as in-year contribution- aligned to priorities
- The process is initiated by the employee, by performing a review on the progress made across the year, before discussing their reflections with their people manager

WHY DO WE NEED A YEAR-END REVIEW?

- The process encourages both the employee and manager to review the in-year contribution and skills maturity, together
- The Year-End Review process allows the opportunity to reflect on achievements, review the progress made through the year, discuss areas for future development, assess in-year contribution and skills maturity and drive skills development, with a focus on tangible outputs and delivery
- The assessment triggers next steps for the employee, including future learning, new assignments, development plans, and promotions

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS OF THE YEAR-END REVIEW FOR EMPLOYEES?

- More holistic and forward-looking approach helps employees to remain engaged and feel they have a future within Capgemini
- Employees have the avenue to present and showcase their skillset, performance throughout the year and career aspirations, which provides the opportunity for them to shape the trajectory of their career

WHEN SHOULD WE HAVE THE YEAR END REVIEW?

- The Year-End Review timing is determined by the HRBPs for each entity, however, the process should start at the beginning of the Q4 period, and end in Q1 of the following year

WHO ELSE IS INVOLVED IN THE PROCESS?

- People Manager – performs the assessment of the employee's in-year contribution and skills maturity
- HR Business Partner (HRBP) – drives the process, launches the Year-End Review campaign, supports the people manager and employee, runs the people review and arranges final consolidation

PROCESS FLOW OF THE YEAR-END REVIEW APPROACH

The Year-End Review process provides the opportunity for both the employee and people manager to contribute, while allowing for transparency and accountability on decisions
